

From left to right - Indian Minister for EGC and Water Conservation Dr. Nitin Raut, Ven. Atureliye Ratana Thera, JHU leader Ven. Omalpe Sobhitha Thera, Ministers G.L. Peiris, Anura Priyadarshana Yapa and Patali Champika Ranawaka.
Pic by Kushan Pathiraja

Humans now in 'no man's zone': Champika

Man's misfortune of distancing himself from a wholesome environment and focusing solely on technological development has left him today in 'no man's zone', Power and Energy Minister Patali Champika Ranawaka said yesterday.

Addressing the Eco-Revolution 2012 international conference at the Foundation Institute, Minister Ranawaka maintained that had man followed the harmonious existence with nature, recommended by Lord Buddha, he would not have been in dire straits today.

Environment Minister Anura Priyadarshana Yapa emphasised that though much damage had already been done to the ecology systems on the planet, all efforts should be made to preserve whatever that was left rather than moping on what was lost. Parliamentarian and head of the Sadaham Sevena, Ven.

CO-EXISTENCE

“ Environment Minister Anura Priyadarshana Yapa emphasised that though much damage had already been done to the ecology systems on the planet, all efforts should be made to preserve whatever that was left rather than moping on what was lost ”

Aturaliye Ratana Thera who organised the event emphasised the need for more such gatherings of like-minded people to mobilise the human race and put them on the right track.